A famous list: Desert Island Discs

One evening in 1941, Roy Plomley was sitting at home when he got an idea for a new radio show. He wrote a letter to the BBC with his idea, and the BBC loved it. In 1942 they started to put the show on the radio with Plomley as the host, and now, more than 70 years later, the show is still going strong on British radio. It's name? Desert Island Discs (aka DID).

The idea is this: each week, someone well-known is invited to the show – usually an actor, a singer, a politician, or someone from TV. In recent years, people like actor Colin Firth, adventurer Bear Grylls, celebrity cook Jamie Oliver, and novelist J.K. Rowling have been guests. And what does the guest have to do? Well, he or she has to imagine that they have been stranded on a desert island but that they are allowed to have eight pieces of music with them. The host interviews the guests, talking about their life and work, and the eight pieces of music that the guest talks about are mixed in.

After a few shows the guests were asked about other things they'd like to bring to their island. They could choose one book and one special luxury item to take with them. That certainly brought some cool ideas. The writer of children's books, Allan Ahlberg, asked for a wall to kick a soccer ball against, while famously pale-skinned singer Annie Lennox asked for sunscreen.

And, perhaps not surprisingly, writer J. K. Rowling asked for "an endless supply of pens and paper."

From the very beginning, DID was incredibly popular, and it still is – there have been thousands of shows. Plomley was the presenter for every episode until he died in 1971, and since then there have only been three other presenters. The show's opening and closing music has never changed, and for British people it is immediately recognizable as the DID theme music.

There have been some memorable guests. One of the most controversial was an opera singer, Elizabeth Schwarzkopf, whose eight records included seven of herself singing – though, to be fair, it did seem that no one had explained the concept of the show to her well enough!

The idea of choosing just eight pieces of music to listen to forever, while you're completely alone in the world, is one that seems to capture people's imagination. What would you choose to have with you? Of course, if you like music at all, it's almost impossible to come up with a list of only eight pieces of music without leaving out things that you love. But that, perhaps, is part of the beauty of the whole DID concept.

3 Read the article again. Answer the questions.

- 1 How did Desert Island Discs start?

- 2 Who are the guests on the show?

- 3 What ten things can guests take with them to the island?

- 4 How many presenters have there been?

- 5 What was different about the opera singer's choice of music?

- 6 What is the difficult part of making a list of eight pieces of music?

4 Imagine you could be a guest on DID. What eight pieces of music would you choose? And what would your book and your luxury item be? Write a short paragraph.

DEVELOPING WRITING

Travel advice – an email

1 Read the emails quickly and answer the questions.

- 1 What is the climate of Laura's vacation destination?

- 2 What clothing items does Sean suggest taking?

- 3 What four essential items does he suggest taking?

Hi Sean,

I live in a nice warm place, but soon I'm going to travel to Minnesota in winter, so it's going to be really cold, maybe wet, too. I'm looking forward to the trip, but I'm really not very sure what I should take. Can you help?

Laura

Hi Laura,

That's great that you're going somewhere very different from home! But you're right – it's important to think about what to take. So the first thing, of course, is clothes.

- Take a hat and wear it; it's the best protection against the cold. The best kind totally covers your ears.
- Take sweaters and coats, but it's better to think about wearing several layers of thinner clothing rather than single, heavy items.
- Take at least one good pair of waterproof boots; otherwise, your feet might get cold and/or wet, and that's really not what you want!
- A pair of gloves is necessary, too, as long as they're warm and waterproof.

Then there are other essential items. Think about taking these things:

- a pair of sunglasses if you're going to be out in the snow – the bright reflection off snow can hurt unprotected eyes.
- some sunscreen. In winter? Yes – the reflected sun can burn your skin, too, so protection is good.
- lip balm to stop your lips from getting sore from the wind and cold.
- some basic medicines to help with colds and runny noses – always useful, especially if you're going to be a long way from a town.

So there you go, Laura. Hope this helps and have a great vacation!

Sean

2 Read Sean's email again. Answer these questions.

- 1 What's the best kind of hat to take?

- 2 What's better than a single, heavy sweater?

- 3 What should the boots protect you from?

- 4 What should gloves be like?

- 5 Why should you take sunglasses in winter?

- 6 When is it especially useful to have medicine with you?

3 Answer these questions about the email.

- 1 How does Sean introduce his reply?

- 2 How does he separate the different things he suggests taking?

- 3 Each thing comes with an explanation of why Laura should take it. How does Sean indicate reasons? (There are several different ways.)

4 You're going to write an email to a friend who wants advice about what to pack for a trip. Read what the friend writes. Choose a, b, or c for your answer.

Hi ... ,

I'm going on vacation to a) a really hot place b) your town/city c) a place you know really well. But I'm not sure what to take with me. Can you give me a nice, simple list of ideas please?

Thanks!

Jim

5 Write your answer. Write 150–200 words.
